Dietitian

What Is Public Health?

- health protection
- disease prevention
- health promotion
- injury prevention

Why Is It for You?

- great salaries
- local jobs available
- good work schedule
- jobs for a variety of professionals

Our dietitians aren't stuck in an office all day! Instead, they're in schools, in workplaces and in the community promoting good health. All this flexibility, plus they can earn an average of $57 600 per year.

As a dietitian you will:

- work closely with the public to promote healthier food choices among pregnant women, children, teens, adults, and seniors
- visit workplaces, retirement homes, long-term care homes, schools, and daycares to help them create healthier menus
- help target populations learn how to prepare healthy meals and develop modified diets
- teach people how to read and understand food labels
