

Your future is in your hands!

Speech Language Pathologist

What Is Public Health?

- health protection
- disease prevention
- health promotion
- injury prevention

Why Is It for You?

- great salaries
- local jobs available
- good work schedule
- jobs for a variety of professionals

Our speech language pathologists get to work with preschool children either one-on-one or in a group setting. They meet new people every day, work from an office and earn an average of $62 800 per year!

As a speech language pathologist you will:

- work with pre-school children and their families to offer helpful and creative ways to improve speech and language development
- offer group sessions to parents of young children who need treatment
- help create resources on speech and language development milestones and speech and language stimulation for infants and children
- work with families to create therapy plans and goals for the children

